

Dear Sir or Madam,

The work of law enforcement is far too important for there to be any sort of "dead zones" of communication. Therefore, I fully support the idea that there should be one band for law enforcement, and the remaining bands, cost issues notwithstanding (read: NEXTEL) go to telecommunication corporations. Indeed, don't phone companies gouge the hapless consumer enough? Thanking you for your kind consideration, I remain,

Sincerely,

Charles E. Witteck
